UNAPPRECIATED LABOR.

The Hard Lives Led by Locomotiva Fireman.

They Are Rarely the Recipients mendation.

It is doubtful if there is a man on the train who is less appreciated than the fireman. The public shakes hands with the conductor who has charge of the train, thanks the brakeman for many little courtesies, bows to the baggage master who looks after its luggage in transit-perhaps, if it is a masculine public, swears at him-trusts its valuables with the express messenger and talks long and loud of the "brave engi-neer." But the fireman—he who bends to his work and feeds the fire that makes the steam—is never mentioned. Some-times a purse is made up for the engineer. No one ever heard of the fireman getting a purse, but, according to In-dianapolis News, the records show that he has performed as many deeds of valor as the engineer. Again, if the train leaves the track or goes into another train the fireman has fewer chances to escape than any man on the train except, perhaps, the mail clerk, shut up like a rat in a cage. When the fireman is at work, and that is nearly all the the "Hess" shoes once and time when the wheels are turning, he stands stooped over shoveling in the you're disappointed - the fuel or raking the coals in the fire box; fuel or raking the coals in the fire box; for or bunion that has troubled you for years did not immediately disappear. But even guarantee you'll be satisfied then one eye is ahead, his hand on the bell cord and the other eye fastened on or we'll give back your the steam guage, whose little black hands, fluctuating back and forth, gauge his labor as well as the steam. There is a science in "feeding" an engine that is not understood by one not in the business. There is a way to throw in the coal and to empty the shovel and close the furnace door at the same time. It requires nice calculation that tells how many "soop loads" are needed to send the hands on the gauge to the proper figure, deft handling to keep the deck of the cabin clean and a hundred other little things that go to make a skillful fireman-one that saves money for the company by husbanding the coal. In the old days the fire an on "wood burners" had a hard time it and certainly earned the small money he received for his services, but he had a sinceure compared with the man in blue overalls and jumper who "stokes up" one of the huge "mogule" or "hoge" of the present day. These engines haul freight and cat up coal as if it were greased paper. The fireman is at work continuously, and about the only time he has to rest is when his train "takes a siding" to let a more aristocratic passenger train pass. On the "ten wheelers" that pull the Big Four fast trains or the engines that haul the express trains of the Vandalia, Pennsylvania, Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and the new Monon the fireman has a hard time of it. The machinery needs a large amount of steam, and it takes a great deal of coal to make it, and the

THEY KNOW IT ALL.

Certain Women Who Think Themselves Encyclopedias. Have you among your acquaintances one particular individual of the feminine gender who knows it all? Of course, you have, for her kind abounds in wholesale quantities, and your circle would have to be very restricted if you did not happen to meet once in awhile one of this disagrecable species, says the Philadelphia Times. The strange part about it is that the woman who thinks she knows it all is generally the one least informed on the subject she chooses to debate upon. Those who are really competent to give advice and state opinions are usually silent unless their sentiments are absolutely dragged out of them, but the woman who knows it all, according to her own estimate, airs her views with a lavishness that makes you long to slap her, if such an action were but per-

She riles you continually, she never rubs you the right way, and if she says a thing is black you are possessed with a desire to swear that it is white, even though you know that for once she is right, and that black is black. She poses as an authority on fashion, religion, social laws and customs, the rules of card playing, and the science of housekeeping.

If you touch on theosophy she is right with you, ready to correct any state-ment you may make. If you dabble in the intricacies of politics she can give you points on the tariff or the silver bill, and so impresses you with your own infinitesimal knowledge of things in general that before long you actually hate the sight of her. She is not popular, the woman who knows it all, and unless she once in awhile will admit an error or allow a correction such a one is certain to narrow the circle of her acquaintances to those very few unfortunates who cannot by any possibility get away from her.

Susa, in Africa. Only four feet high, of a dark olive color, savage and naked, they have neither houses nor temples, neither fire nor human food. They live only on ants, mice and serpents, diversified by a few roots and fruits. They let their nails grow long, like talons, the better to dig for ants, and the more easily to tear in pieces their favorite snakes The Dokos used to be invaluable as slaves, and they were taken in large numbers. The slave hunters used to hold up bright-colored ciothes as they came to the moist, warm bamboo woods, where these human monkeys still live, and the poor Dokos could not resist the attractions offered by such superior people. They crowded round them and were taken in thousands. In slavery they were docile, attached, obedient, with few wants and excellent

These queer people have only one fault-a love for ants, mice and serpents, and a habit of speaking to yer with their heads on the ground and their heels in the air. Yer is their idea of a superior power, to whom they talk in this comical nature when they are dispirited or angry, or tired of ants and snakes, and longing for unknown food. The Dokos seem to come nearest of all people yet discovered to that terrible

TOO MANY FATHERS. Difficulties Which Confront the Russ Swatn

A pretty story comes from Russia by way of compensation for the many ugly stories starting there. During the las Bussian war with Turkey the soldiers of a regiment rejoicing in the name of the Kekholmsky regiment found a woman lying dead with a living child in her arms. The child was adopted by the regiment and educated at its expense. At the close of her school life she took up her abode with her collective fathers.

The other day a young Russian officer demanded the hand of Marie Kekholms kaya, of the regiment. A meeting was called, the parents considered the matter, and when young Lieut. Sleinmer gave proofs of his good character the regimental consent to the marriage was given. The lieutenant must be a brave man to thus face a whole regiment of fathers, when one father is usually considered rather formidable when that particular question is to be asked.

-"Mary Jane," said the Dakota farmer to his spouse, "it seems like flyin' in the face of Providence to name the boy Elijah. It sounds too much like the old feller in the Rible that was carried away by a cyclone. I don't think it's a proper name at all fer this country."—Indianapolis Journal.
